

Tips & Tricks for managing needle phobia

For Patients

1. Practice Strategies

Controlled breathing, the applied tension technique for fainting, thought challenging and devices for pain management take practice. Don't wait until you really want to rely on these things to work out the how and when of using them.

2. Don't Avoid

Write a list of the situations, objects and activities that you find challenging and progressively begin to practice these from easiest to hardest.

3. Start Early

Practicing strategies and making headway with a phobia can take time don't wait until you really need a needle to start working on it or you may add undue pressure to the situation and increase the chances of having a more anxiety provoking event or having a more negative experience.

4. Rewards

Making gains with a needle phobia isn't always intrinsically rewarding. Set a goal and set a reward that's motivating for you and remind yourself of that reward when times get tough.

5. Having a support person present can help with comfort and distraction. Ask to lie down for the procedure if you think you might faint and stay an extra amount of time so your healthcare practitioner can make sure you are ok before you go home.

Corrie Ackland
Clinical Director, Clinical
Psychologist B.Psych (Hons)
M. Psych (Clinical)

Prepared by Corrie Ackland
© Sydney Phobia Clinic

Disclaimer:

The information contained in this document is general in nature and does not take into account your personal situation. You should consider whether the information is appropriate to your needs, and where appropriate, seek professional advice from your health care practitioner/employing healthcare facility.

NeedleCalm and the NeedleCalm logo are registered trademarks of NeedleCalm Pty Ltd.

001-REC001-24062021.DOC.02-000